a quiet market town with no military presence was chosen as the secret communications centre for Britain as the country prepared for war with Germany in 1937 when hostilities began. Q Central attracted a dozen other clandestine operations set up to defend the country or designed to confuse and undermine enemy morale. The headquarters of radar, RAF Group 60, also came to Leighton Buzzard to be hidden from German attack and to be close to the telephone and radio communications needed to run its vast chain of radar stations. These directed the defending fighters that saved the country in the Battle of Britain and then took the bombing war to Germany close by. For the same reasons of secrecy and safety were the satellite stations of Bletchley Park, the now famous code-breaking centre, the Met Office at Dunstable which gave the all-clear for the D-Day landings, black ops units that set up false radio stations and wrote propaganda to confuse the enemy, and airfields used for dropping agents behind enemy lines. At Q Central itself was the largest telephone exchange in the world with more than 1,000 teleprinters communicating with all the armed services in every theatre of war and directing the operations of the secret services. Now the restrictions of the Official Secrets Act have been lifted, enabling eight members of the Leighton Buzzard and District Archaeology and History Society to piece together this compelling story for the first time.

You've seen them hanging on telephone poles and posted on supermarket bulletin boards, but have you ever wondered about the stories behind them? When her orange tabby, Zak, disappeared, Nancy Davidson did what countless people before her had done: she made a lost cat poster. And after days of frantic searching, she found him. Nancy was ecstatic; Zak seemed happy too. Although being a cat, it was hard to tell. Zak may have remained his old self, but Nancy had changed from that moment on. She became acutely aware of lost cat posters, studied their language, composition, and design. She was drawn to their folk art, mostly, however, she was intrigued by the messages themselves. The stories behind the posters. It wasn't long before Nancy reached out to other owners of lost and found cats to offer empathy and support. They told hilarious and often poignant stories, they sought advice. That's when Dr. Nancy, the cat lover and the seasoned therapist, stepped in and offered insights brought to light by her shrewd but never self-serious analysis. What they told her and what she learns creates a captivating look into the heart of our relationships with our pets and each other. For seven years, Dr. Nancy followed the lost cat trail, discovering answers to a question that eventually touches all of us: What will you do for love? The Secrets of Lost Cats traces the evolution of nancy davidson s seven year passion for lost cat posters from the astonishing almost implausible posters she encounters across the country and indeed the world to the daring dedication and emotional complexity of the cat owners themselves the secrets of lost cats offers readers an absorbing journey that illuminates love loss and learning to love again even more deeply
